WeCounsel Partners with InSight to Expand Behavioral Health Services

Chattanooga, TN: Today, after months of pilot testing, WeCounsel Solutions, LLC is excited to announce that the company has officially partnered with InSight, the leading national telepsychiatry service provider. The partnership is designed to increase access to mental health services across the United States, especially in under-served areas. The two companies have collaborated to develop a web-based telehealth application which will be called Inpathy.

Inpathy is designed as a simpler and cheaper alternative to the expensive, bulky videoconferencing hardware that is often used in telehealth settings. It is a comprehensive, browser-based video conferencing portal which will allow providers and consumers in InSight's network to meet on any PC or desktop computer, as long as each party has a webcam and internet connection.

The platform will be predominantly utilized in a business to business format with outpatient centers and clinics being the primary users. Importantly, Inpathy will only be used to facilitate routine visits and is not meant to be a solution for crisis centers or crisis scenarios.

WeCounsel Co-Founder Quotes:

Riley Draper, Chief Communications & Marketing Officer:

"We are very excited to work with InSight Telepsychiatry to bring Inpathy to the public. InSight has been providing quality telehealth services nationwide since 1999 and we see this partnership as a huge asset to our young and growing startup."

Harrison Tyner, CEO/President:

"This partnership represents a collaboration between a long-standing industry leader and a young, entrepreneurially minded healthcare company. We feel that this singular intersection fosters much needed innovation in mental health and telehealth in general. WeCounsel looks forward to continuing to change the landscape of healthcare delivery as the partnership comes to fruition."

Closing Statement: "The partnership will provide access to behavioral health services for a multitude of individuals who struggle to receive them currently. We see this as a powerful opportunity for InSight's providers, as well as, the consumers they serve." - Riley Draper

About WeCounsel: WeCounsel is a HIPAA compliant, telehealth platform that connects mental health providers to their clients online through videoconferencing and practice management tools. The company was founded in Chattanooga, TN in 2011 by Harrison Tyner, Riley Draper, and Joshua Goldberg in an effort to garner increased access to mental health services in the U.S. WeCounsel's mission is to promote continuity of care and access to mental health services by providing professionals and their clients with a convenient and effective tool for facilitating successful sessions online. WeCounsel is a recent graduate of the GigTank accelerator, and is a proud member of the Mozilla Ignite Team.
